

Strengthening Parliamentary Scrutiny and Lawmaking

Challenges and opportunities in the Western Balkans and European Neighbourhood Policy East Region

Regional conference | 8-9 April 2026
Prague Czech Republic

Draft Programme

Introduction

Parliaments play a vital role in ensuring that laws are prepared, scrutinised, and adopted based on the best available evidence, and are implemented effectively and on time to deliver intended policy objectives and results. To fulfil this role, parliaments need strong internal capacities and procedures to access, analyse, and use the best available information and evidence consistently throughout the legislative process. Strong government-parliament collaboration is equally essential, as most laws originate from the executive who also access to key information and data which can help parliament to make informed decisions at key stages of parliamentary deliberations and scrutiny.

Evidence-based lawmaking is fundamental for the quality of public policy, the rule of law and public trust in democratic institutions. It is particularly critical for advancing EU accession processes and partnerships, which place additional pressure on partner administrations to adopt and implement large volumes of complex legislation in a timely manner. Instruments such as regulatory impact assessments (RIA), public consultations, and stakeholder engagement and ex post evaluation are key to ensuring that adopted legislation is aligned with national priorities and EU standards and work in practice.

Beyond adoption, parliaments have a key role in monitoring and evaluating the implementation of laws through post-legislative scrutiny (PLS) and other tools which help identify ineffective policies and laws that fail to deliver their original intended objectives. Ex post evaluation of laws is equally important for reducing unnecessary burdens on the economy, advancing simplification and burden reduction, and improving governance. Ultimately, this helps parliaments hold the Governments accountable and deliver better results.

Despite progress in recent years, parliaments in the Western Balkan and Eastern Partnership regions continue to face significant challenges in applying many of these tools effectively and in strengthening co-operation and co-ordination with governments. Addressing these gaps is essential for improving legislative quality and accountability.

Objective

This second regional conference on effective and evidence-based lawmaking will be hosted by the Chamber of Deputies of the Czech Republic. It will have a particular focus on key challenges parliamentary administrations face during planning, preparation and scrutiny of draft laws, as well as challenges related to parliament-government collaboration and co-ordination. The objective is to foster dialogue and knowledge exchange among senior officials, experts, and representatives from Western Balkan (Albania, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Kosovo*, Montenegro, North Macedonia, Serbia) and European Neighbourhood Policy (ENP) East administrations (Armenia, Moldova and Ukraine), as well as key experts and stakeholders from selected EU member states and institutions and other partner organisations.

The conference will provide a platform for in-depth discussions on topics such as parliamentary procedures and capacities for research and analysis, legislative planning and government-parliament collaboration, use of RIA, stakeholder engagement, as well as artificial intelligence (AI) and other tools to advance the quality of parliamentary scrutiny and lawmaking in the region. It will also address challenges related to the status and management of parliamentary staff, recognising their crucial role in building the knowledge and expertise necessary for effective lawmaking. Findings from the most recent SIGMA publications on these and other related topics, as well as presentations from the host parliament and partner organisations will be used to set the scene and facilitate thematic discussions. Participants will share experiences, best practices, and lessons learned from their national contexts and recent developments, contributing to a stronger collective knowledge base, to help advance reforms and EU integration processes. The conference will help to identify priorities for future reforms and explore innovative approaches to strengthen evidence-based lawmaking and legislative oversight.

Organisation and format

The regional conference is jointly organised by the SIGMA Programme, a joint initiative of the OECD and the EU, principally financed by the EU, the Regional School of Public Administration (ReSPA), and GiZ (Eastern Partnership Regional Project for PAR), in close collaboration with the Chamber of Deputies of the Czech Republic and with the support of European Commission DG ENEST.

Most legislation are initiated by the executive branch but those are often prepared and approved outside of the official government plans. Moreover, many of the government-sponsored laws are often scrutinised and approved through shortened/urgent procedures, creating big risks for evidence-based lawmaking and parliamentary scrutiny. Enhancing parliament's capacities for scrutiny and co-ordination with government are crucial. There are also challenges in planning and implementing EU law harmonisation in a timely and effective manner. How to enhance consultation on MP and Government-sponsored laws? How can government administration help parliament during the preparation and scrutiny of MP-initiated laws?
